

YOU KNOW YOU'VE LIVED IN LAS VEGAS TOO LONG WHEN...

- The temperature drops below 85 and you feel a chill.
- You notice the best parking place is determined by shade, not by distance.
- You've learned that a seat belt makes a good branding iron.
- You never, ever slow down for a yellow light.
- You know someone who makes $100,000 a year parking cars.
- Hot water comes out of both taps.
- You don't find it strange that the grocery store, the drug store and the Laundromat all have slot machines.
- You've hard-boiled a dozen eggs in the trunk of your car between the grocery store and home.
- You avoid the "Strip" at all costs...unless you have company.
- You understand the phrase "today is my Friday."
- The water in your pool is too hot to swim...and you don't have a heater.
- Your power bill in the summer is higher than your mortgage.
- You think it was better when the "Mob" ran the town.
- You've ever golfed when it was 117 degrees.
- You can't buy a car on Sunday, but you can buy a drink, gamble or get a massage.
- You've never had an auto battery last more than two years.
- You get breakfast sticker shock when you go out of town.
- The kids think the restaurant server lights are "mini-keno."
- You genuflect when you hear the name "Steve Wynn."
- You were married by an Elvis impersonator.
